

Building a Culture of Learning

Spring Online Study January 13 – April 17

Facilitated by Jackie Rogers and Misty Higgins,
Professional Learning Coordinators at the Kentucky Department of Education

This self-paced study allows educators across the state an opportunity to dig deeper into how Professional Learning Communities (PLCs) can help build a culture of learning in schools and districts. The goal of the study is to develop a common understanding of:

- the benefits of and the work that defines the PLC process,
- the role of school and district leaders in supporting and implementing PLCs, and
- what it means to be a teacher in an effective PLC.

The study will include:

- monthly assignments including articles, book excerpts, videos and other related media,
- time for reflection,
- action research as you apply learning to your practice, and
- opportunities to collaborate with other KY educators as we share successes and struggles with the goal of improving teaching and learning for students.

A Google Classroom format allows participants to work at their own pace as they read and interact with the community.
