Appendix A: Writing and Review Committees

The writing team, composed of current world language teachers, represented both rural and urban settings – including representation from several different regions of the state. While these teachers taught a variety of courses and grade levels throughout their careers, the selected committee members were currently teaching courses related to the standards development process: world language. Additionally, the selected writers served in many roles in their schools, world language community and a wide variety of professional organizations. To ensure fidelity to the standards, the writing committee provided feedback at all stages of the development process. The writing and review committee members listed below represented Kentucky’s best as evidenced by their countless qualifications.
